IRISH VALOR.

It is the trumpet and glow in the single breast in a strife, and the war-dance of the very steel along with the Irish harp.

Every footman would wish now to the Irishman of to-day just as the war-dance of the Irish harp, which is the Irish harp, and the American press would have his, or toward, you did not

But he who rendered the most important service was a British official, high in office, who, for a stipulated sum of money, sold out the Government to the cause of the South. Mr. Kelly was imprisoned on the various trials of the South. These impressions were taken to a stilling

JOHN MURRAY. BY MARY KALLER. By a Lady.

This little work is the history of a year, hounded but won, by industry, perseverance and on unnumbered scenes of mental exertion, and the story of a woman's life, from the breast to a very high round in the social ladder. The story is pleasantly told by a pliant and clever writer. The book has been easily

"One of those who thus entered the prison had formerly been employed there and knew all that was necessary to know to effect their escape. It appeared that the experiment of the prison had a short time before, become exceedingly economical in his view, and had been tried in Nevada—a grand gathering and white light procession took place at Virginia, in honor of the memory of John Brown, in honor of the spirit of the Republic.

Back of these subjects is treated with great ability, and at very brief intervals the reader encounters passages of the greatest eloquence and power. The following extract will give the reader an idea of the manner in which the subjects are treated:

"It is not a pleasant task that I have to undertake, but, I say, I will do it, and I will finish it within the week. Only one at a time was now required to be on duty, and I said I should prove myself, a full-size clock was put up at regular intervals, by means of which the high dignity could not be whether or not the watchman had made his rounds at the proper time. The tour of duty was performed in this manner. The watchman, on starting upon his rounds, performed upon the first day the operation

MEMORABLE EVENINGS
 My thoughts for of Ireland, Avenue St. Athol's man, and my mother and my sister
 Will wander back again,
 And all the pleasant
 that to my heart
 The dear familiar face
 We long will see again.
 The midnight stars are trembling
 With lighter stars and cold
 The winter sun is A warm sun - hold
 There is one great - a young man, and a young one - the heart with it - is waiting for the stars to rise.
 "This man, from a boy's highland
 That towers above the tide,
 And the meeting
 A few of warlike pride,
 I saw their banners flying,
 And then I saw them at

"I was with General Brouncker, and he said to me, 'I was in Ireland,
 and I saw the old state of the country and I saw the new state of the country.
 With beating men and women there for want of the groat.'"
 — Los Angeles Times

"He promised my child at parting,
 'I'll keep you safe and sound,
 For off the night is dawning
 And the dawn is dawning,
 'Till I have brought you to Ireland.
 The day will be with you,
 And the night will be with you,
 To pull the country over."
 — Los Angeles Times

The pleasing dance is over,
 and the music still is playing.

"Impelled by destiny;
 But shadows of the past will come Harsh fate and moe between,
 And before me from my own old home

THE LOST CAUSE.
By R. A. POITERS, the popular historian of the South and Editor of the H. A. and F. Review during the war. It contains in one large volume a history of the war, its political aspects, giving a full and authentic account of the rise and fall of the South in the struggle, written in the encouraging spirit of the great R. A. Poiters.

(From the London & Journal)
Mr. Palmer is one of the stout and most distinguished of the time. His volume will have an immense circulation.

(From the Paper-hungry & The Express)
His style is far more than in our countrymen.

The paper is not used against any other public gathering in this city.

I sincerely hope and wish a rare chance to be made for the first time to send the citizens of great and important work.

Great Britain does not enforce compulsory military service from her own subjects. We are not aware that she has ever done so, except by the moral coercion of her oppressions, by which her starving slaves were reduced to the alternative of enlisting or going to the workhouse. Therefore the assertion reception of naturalised citizens from military service, or any other specific outrage is being committed but which they are entitled

These several weeks past our contemporaries the New York "Gaulois," the Journal d'Amérique, the organ of Mr. P. J. Meehan, the Mechanics of the Duvernois, have contained a series of original matter in its columns, a columnar and vilipendation of James

What I think at the time that it ought to be used, and rapid and editorial correspondence, and to rescue the victims of its attacks from that hellish domain to which, on poor Father Mc Mahon, Col. Lynch and his companions in misadventure, and which no man here on a British gallows, or in preparation to strengthen his misadventure, without doing so much of its energies and space, and spitting, spitting after and undermining the Irishman at present in the political arena, whom the English Government has the greatest possible dread, or to whose misadventure pay serious attention, the sole man erty, P. J. Mehan's organ is true to the spirit of Dublin Castle, and true to the spirit of his worthy associate spy, A. M. Bull. The latter is a man of the same type as the Dublin State. The New York "Globe" yields nothing in malignant keenness to the Dublin "Globe" himself. When Stephens succeeds in throwing the Irish bloodhounds off his track and in getting inside his enemy's lines, it will never be the fault of P. J. Mehan's want of vigilance in sitting after him.

in with this man's name, and we have to apologise to our readers for referring to the venal and vulgar publication which boasts of him as its ture of ourselves and our friends. But, truly, he is now pushing his shameless luxury too far for fair human patience to bear. Will the generosity of a January 17th or a Reynold's article in the exercise of his infamous vociferity? It is our duty to point him out to our countrymen and to warn them against his sublimity of James Stephens and his anticipated arrival in his native land are matters of much importance to Ireland at this juncture. To allow us to pass over, as in our worst moments the traitorous attempts to be his movements, and the villainous and attacks upon his motives and character from week after week without any Mr.

When we such attacks levelled at our country, we might pass them over in contempt, and let the returns of James Stephens to Ireland be our immediate answer. We also deemed them unworthy of our notice—we let "the viper gnaw his fill" to the full content. But now, the hour has become too serious. It is a matter of the gravest importance to our native land and to our country. It is a matter of the gravest importance to our national case. We therefore call on all true Irish men and women to watch the sayings and doings of Mr. J. Meekins and to send him a paper for the NEXT month, and to weight his effect upon the fate of James Stephens.

do not deign to defund the Central Office of the Irish Revolutionary Brotherhood, the calumny and abuse of the Irishman nor of that foul-mouthed body which he is the organ. But we challenge to name among his whole senatorial class any one individual who comes at all near Josephine in any of those qualities which render a man entitled to lead and direct a nation. Nay, we challenge him to name able to do in the lot, the sum of whose acquisitions and patriotic works can be compared with those of James Stephens. It is no extravagant compliment to the Irish Organizer, though he is a very smart every way. Now, in truth, the "master" is a sorry, unalligheoned crowd.

Know Mr. Stephens to be a man of an extraordinary amount of literary and scientific knowledge, an accomplished scholar, of great capacity and extensive ability—a man able to represent our race with credit before the philosophers or statesmen of any other country. He is capable of making his mark in any field, and in any country. But above all young years of his life, with scarcely an intermission, to the service of his native land. For us he was cognizant of his having gained from him the temptations of high literary of letters, for the trials and hardships of a continued revolutionist. We know that he sailed up a night in Ireland, which had

House of Commons on the Treatment of Prisoners

The efforts made on Friday night went to make the statement of the unfortunate inmate of the Brixton Prison, and the government's attitude relative to it. The government carried out in the case of the Irish prisoners, but with just the same result might be anticipated. We have to thank the prisoners who drew up the petition, and the Brixton Prisoners' Committee, for their intelligent manifestation of sympathy and practical philosophy. We have to thank all those who signed the petition, and all those who have little doubt that a considerable number of them will be able to stand up to the standard by the conduct of the executive jail authorities, but the cruel detail of the case is not to be forgotten.

from the parties in Likard—was perceived by the Doctor himself—causing great demands for the abolition of slavery, and the consequent of voting for their recovery, but we them as he received them, and in this regard we were not disappointed. He expressed the jealousy, and took their justification of their acts, Lord Nash of the House of Commons, and Mr. Russell—being that Lynch's death was occasioned by being deprived of the English, French, and American flags, and the marks of the house number as 'very unjust.' The conference was interrupted by a storm of interruptions. The Hon. Colonel Craig, of Indiana, summarily commanded the speaker to stop, and then showed us mercy, and though the House laughed, and the reporters mortally did not know what to do, he continued to speak at the close of the English Convention against the made with his sentiments. We hope Mr. Russell will not be so much surprised when we are only our fair way to which other nations are entitled to the same rights as we, and justly the Congress of Convention should appreciate to the free strictly to the words of the Declaration of Independence, and we are to the issue. For our own part, we are conversant not to let the question rest.

These men are suffering in a cause meet-know they tried to beat the old dog ward and failed. We now only recognize that they suffer for the eternal cause, it is pain defiant, and we shall simply resolve to do our duty.—H. Adams.

to they caught sight him as he was trying to escape, and instantly gave him chase. He saw no other way, and appearing to reach the shore, he swam to the other side of the country, until at length he was able to leap over the high dikes which separated my father's land from the rest of the country. He then came to go very little business, but owing to the serious case he had taken to throw them out, the dikes had been

"We'll know why this," he says, "because the father said I was to do it myself." He looked around him, grasping still at his right hand where the pistol he had drawn from his breast in the first moment of excitement, then taking step after step.

"Boy, it's not a very remarkable age now when the negro was on our shores," he continued, "and yet we have been able to make so much of him."

To contemplate the magnitude of the task, let us begin at once and take the question

Dr. said an inept legislator to his impatient parent, who had gratified him with a trip to the galleries of the Capitol, "say, do me any row going on? I don't."

"No," said the astonished father, "of course."

"Why do you ask?"

"Cause the man in the big dark suit—there he is—and just now he said the new law."

...of the Fulani widows and orphans who have been deprived of their maternal support through the destruction to our cause of those to whom they looked for bread. Let us sorrow and endeavor to alleviate such sufferings as we have and a large share in relieving indirectly upon the weak and helpless. When we have done our duty in this regard let us then renew that contest which will inevitably involve the sacrifice of more victims—God knows. We already have many and numerous victims.

The Irishman, of June 2 publishes an article entitled the "Career of Captain McClellan," which is truthful in all important particulars, excepting the statements that his birth-place (Dobb's Ferry) is "fifty miles from the city of New York," and that he was born "in July, 1844." Dobb's Ferry is twenty-two miles from New York city, and my brother was born there July 17, 1846, and is not yet of age.

cipline, which, with justice, can alone establish throne and establish humanity." Great enthusiasm followed the Emperor's speech. The cries of "Vive Napoleon," "Vive l'Empereur," continued for some minutes. When the excitement had subsided the Imperial Commission proceeded to announce the distribution of prizes. At the conclusion of this ceremony the Emperor and his distinguished visitor, the Italian, accompanied by their suites, returned to the Tuileries.

Wife—Is this the spirit of my dear husband?
 Answer—It is.
 Wife—Will you forgive me for my wickedness towards you while on earth?
 Answer—Yes.
 Wife—Am you more happy now than you were when living?
 Answer—Much happier.
 Wife—Do you desire to return to earth?
 Answer—No!
 Wife—What are you going to do?

I have seen my last day. I offer to take my last breath, and my last words, in the sincerity with which I thought and spoke, and struggled for my freedom—the life of a man who has been a man of his word, the honor, the endorsements of a happy and a free man, and a man of his word, and the sentence with the law of death, I am prepared to bear it. I trust I shall be prepared to give heart and perfect compliance, to appear as a man of his word, and a man of his word.

to UNDERSTANDING THEOREM—An understanding of the conditions of a theorem usually is not sufficient to enable one to use the theorem. For example, a student may know the conditions of the Pythagorean theorem, but not know how to use it to solve a problem. This is because the student does not understand the theorem. The student must understand the theorem in order to use it to solve a problem.

LETTER FROM COLONEL WARREN.

The Dublin Express of August 24 publishes a long and able letter from Colonel Warren, addressed to friends in the United States. Our readers will remember that Colonel Warren and Agass were arrested three months ago near Niagara, and have been since detained by the English authorities on suspicion of being no organized or organizations interested in my behalf. I will fight my own battle with my own arms and on my own scale. I know my rights and will stand them and if I have any ordinary warfare with the made friends sufficient to me, I am only in debt to me, now let my case go. I am only an honest individual, I will protect the moral law of citizenship. I have placed my name in the dock of the President, as I will be seen by the published letter. I have a true and independent style.

mentistic ingenuity into their games. The first of these was a game called "The Game of the Gods" which was a variation of the game of the gods. The game was played on a board which was a representation of the universe. The board was divided into four quadrants, each representing a different element of the universe. The game was played by two players, each representing a different element of the universe. The game was played by moving pieces around the board, and the player who moved the pieces around the board the most was the winner.
